

OhMiBod invited into Accent on Design® at the New York International Gift Fair (NYIGF).

OhMiBod brings line of personal pleasure products to mainstream gift show.

GREENLAND, NH— For Immediate Release —OhMiBod has been chosen as one of 180 exhibitors that will be featured in the NYIGF's Accent on Design exhibition running January 25–29, 2009 at the Jacob Javits Center in New York City. According to NYIGF, this section of the show offers unparalleled access to cutting-edge, fresh and untapped design talent and is "the industry's leading resource for design-led merchandise. Accent on Design presents a dynamic juried collection of contemporary and innovative product lines across all categories."

At the show, OhMiBod will feature its entire line of iPod® vibrators, including its OhMiBod flagship product, OhMiBod Gspot and Naughtibod, along with its Boditalk line of cell-phone vibrators. The company will also introduce its recently announced wireless music vibrator, FreeStyle, which will be available in late March.

"OhMiBod is pleased to have been chosen to be part of Accent on Design," says OhMiBod founder Suki Dunham. "We feel that our acceptance into this gift show brings us one step closer to becoming the company that introduced the first socially acceptable vibrator, a cornerstone of our company's mission to create and offer unique, truly innovative and hip pleasure products and accessories."

OhMiBod will also put on display its LOVEBUCKLE product, the company's foyer into the fashion world. LOVEBUCKLE is a super-slick brushed-metal belt buckle with a circular window that showcases the designs of One® condoms. LOVEBUCKLE will be packaged with a high-quality leather belt and a tin containing two One® condoms. One® condoms are sold in over 200 different graphic designs that can be displayed in this new buckle and will make the idea of safe sex fun, hip and stylish. This cool new accessory will be available in late February and will retail for $85. As Suki says, "Buckle up for love!"
